Noting that while much of America would be gathered around picnic tables with friends and families, Farr opined that our troops would be hunkered down in tents or patrolling dangerous streets while scarfing down MREs.

"I stand fully behind the men and women fighting for us in the field. I want to support them in any way I can," said Farr. "I may disagree strongly with the President on the conduct of this war, but that does not color my support of the troops."

The packages Farr helped pack contained individual-sized toiletries, pre-paid phone cards, snacks, and trinkets like playing cards.
